Prerequisites/Requirements: Two years of previous Chinese language study

Description

This course is the continuation of the second-year Chinese. The goal of the course is to develop and advance the students' communicative competence in all four aspects of language skills: listening, speaking, reading, and writing through readings and discussions of socio-cultural topics relevant to today's China.

The course meets 6 academic hours per week, for a total of 45 academic hours over the course of the term. This is an integrated course that includes grammar lectures, a drill, and an activity section. Besides, one-on-one class meets twice a week, one academic hour per week in total.

During the grammar lecture portion of the class, students are introduced to new words and grammar patterns in the textbook lesson. Teachers use question and answer and other techniques to ensure that students thoroughly understand the lesson text and can use the patterns and words introduced with accurate pronunciation and context. This comprehensive approach ensures that students gain not just a passive understanding of how these grammatical elements are used in the lesson text, but active knowledge of the function of these elements as they are used in every day speech and writing.

Drill and practice include structured, controlled practice, and also opportunities for students to practice language in freer contexts, such as debates, discussions, etc. The goal is to solidify students' understanding of the lesson material. During this task-based section, teachers emphasize accuracy in pronunciation and intonation, usage and structure, while maintaining fluency and pace of expression. Discussion and debates are an extension of drill and practice. Teachers select topics based on the lecture/grammar portion of classes and require students both to proactively use new words and phrases, and to construct sentences of increasing length and complexity. Authentic materials are used to enrich students' cultural knowledge and experience.

One-on-one classes are used to review and practice areas in need of particular help. Students may, alternatively, choose a topic of interest that matches his or her skill level and make a free report to the instructor. This exercise is designed to foster the student's ability to use language fluently at length.
