Description

This course is designed to provide intermediate to advanced-level students additional practice in spoken Chinese. The course pushes students beyond the structured drill and information gap communicative exercises typical of lower level language courses, and aims to provide students with the linguistic tools necessary to participate in a substantive exchange of ideas. Emphasis is placed on communicative competence during free discussion and debate. Topics of discussion are broad, ranging from social and cultural issues to political issues such as economic reform.

Objectives

By the end of the course, students:

- Demonstrate general improvement of Chinese oral skills
- Are able to communicate clearly about some topics of interest to an educated audience
- Form sentences clearly with improved fluency of expression
- Demonstrate improved confidence with speaking in Chinese to native speakers

Course Requirements

This course is highly interactive. Classes are typically arranged as follows:

- Each student presents an oral report to the class using vocabulary and grammar previously studied. Preparation for the oral report sometimes involves interviewing people or investigating topics outside of class. The student responds to his/her classmates' questions before the instructor corrects mistakes and reviews difficult segments.
- The class reviews the previous lesson as a group.
- The class reads the new text, practicing new vocabulary and grammar structures, discussing the material, and engaging in formal debate on the topic.

Students are expected to prepare thoroughly for each class session. This includes listening to audio materials on a daily basis, reviewing new grammar and vocabulary covered in class, memorizing new vocabulary prior to class, preparing all discussion topics, etc. Students are expected to participate actively in class, proactively attempting to incorporate new patterns into their speech. Students have daily homework assignments that must be returned to the instructor on time. In addition, there are biweekly quizzes and midterm and final exams.
