Description

This course is offered to students with no previous Arabic language study. The course lays the framework for developing the four skills of reading, listening, writing, and speaking. Students learn the Arabic script and sounds, practicing handwriting and typing. The course covers elementary grammar (including sentence structure, gender and plural agreement, tenses, and negation), and basic vocabulary.

The course focuses on Arabic sound and writing systems and builds an understanding of the basic grammatical structures as a means to compose sentences and short paragraphs related to survival needs and daily life, primarily in the present tense. This course focuses on reading and comprehending basic Arabic texts with familiar vocabulary and simple discourse and utilizing limited vocabulary in simple contexts with improved subject-verb agreement, adjective agreement, and tenses. The course rotates through high-frequency vocabulary and expressions, enabling students to ask and answer simple questions and describe themselves. Course themes aim to teach students Arabic through virtual engagement with Jordanian culture and daily life in Amman.

Driven by the concept of communicative proficiency and the goal of functional competency, CET Jordan programs treat Arabic language as one system of communication, guiding students to employ the appropriate register to perform a variety of real-life communicative functions. CET's Modern Standard Arabic (MSA) and Jordanian dialect courses focus on their respective registers. In novice-level courses, a limited degree of integration is encouraged to prepare students for the diglossic nature of the Arabic-speaking world.

The course employs a student-centered approach and focuses on communicative competence, with class sessions incorporating elements of written and aural media produced for native speakers. Through the completion of concrete tasks, that involve interaction with native Arabic speakers and engagement with contemporary Arab culture, students practice interactive functional skills such as listening comprehension and conversation strategies, working to communicate effectively on an increasing range of subjects.

Course Requirements

The pace of instruction is intensive. In-class activities and homework may include listening to audio materials, memorizing new patterns and vocabulary, reading and writing short paragraphs and texts, reviewing material learned the previous day, and activating new vocabulary. In addition to regular class time, the course also requires regular meetings with academic partners and attendance at office hours, and may also include special lectures, debates, interviews, or structured dialogues with native speakers to simulate the cultural environment. Attendance for class, academic partner and instructor meetings, and special activities is factored into students' participation grades. Participation grades also take into account preparation for and active engagement in both synchronous and asynchronous course components. Students should expect to spend a minimum of one hour studying for every hour spent in class.

All homework assignments are due at the beginning of class and late assignments are not accepted. For the mid-term project, students assume the role of the teacher for a 20-minute presentation on one of the four skills: reading, writing, listening, or speaking. The final written exam is comprehensive and includes all vocabulary and grammatical structures covered during the semester. The final oral interview exam covers the depth and breadth of course material. Individual interviews last approximately 15 minutes. The final assignment is a written paper of no less than five pages which includes a description of themselves, their studies on Jordanian culture, and a reflection on what they learned throughout the program. Students are required to present a three-minute in-class presentation on the subject of their final assignment using 90% of the vocabulary learned in class.
